

James Cocks, AICP, LEED AP

Consultant

James Cocks is a professional, certified planner who brings a strong combination of technical knowledge and theoretical skills. His perspectives combine architecture, planning and the social sciences through his over six years of practical experience.

His work at Lord Cultural Resources bridges master planning, facility planning, and cultural planning. His project experience includes some of the firm's most complex projects, including the Royal Alberta Museum in downtown Edmonton and the West Kowloon Cultural District in Hong Kong. He has also developed cultural plans, including the St. Albert Cultural Master Plan in Alberta, the Port Hope Cultural Plan and Joint Feasibility Study in Port Hope, Ontario, and a regional tourism plan in eastern Ontario.

James is a member of the American Institute of Certified Planners and a LEED Accredited Professional. He holds a bachelor's degree in architecture from Yale University, a post-graduate certificate in social science research methods from the University of Hong Kong, and a master's degree in urban planning from Columbia University. His master's thesis, which analyzed the demography of New York City in relation to cultural resource designations, was awarded best thesis for social justice.
