

NATALIE BORNSTEIN

Senior Consultant

Natalie is a Senior Consultant with expertise in planning. She works with organizations at all-phases, from the early development of an organization, to its interpretation, content, and exhibitions, and then onwards into strategically preparing for its future. The projects are primarily based in the United States, varying in structure from conservancies, official state designated museums, to historic sites, and children's museums.

Natalie brings her passion for the humanities and cultural spaces into her work, ensuring all peoples find a point of interest and create a connection to the content and places. A skilled communicator, she listens carefully to clients' needs and responds with enthusiasm and creativity. Natalie is a dedicated project manager, working diligently to deliver projects with acute attention to detail, providing realistic, practical, and innovative solutions.

Prior to joining Lord Cultural Resources, Natalie worked with numerous nonprofit organizations including the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, gaining experience in membership services, development, and administration.

Natalie graduated from Washington University in St. Louis with a Bachelor of Arts in Ancient Studies and from Teachers College, Columbia University in the City of New York with a Master of Arts in Arts Administration. Her thesis work focused on historic house museums and their sustainability, accessibility, and innovation in the 21st century.
