

NATALIE BORNSTEIN

Consultant

While based in the New York office, as a Consultant, Natalie works with both the Toronto and New York teams. Her projects range from planning and implementation services to interpretive planning and content development. The projects are primarily based in the United States and vary in organization from conservancies managing public parks to museums dedicated to history. She works collaboratively to provide integral project support and to produce conclusive, solution-based reports that are reflective of the client needs and the current market.

Prior to joining Lord Cultural Resources, Natalie worked with nonprofit organizations including the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, gaining experience in membership services, development, and administration.

Natalie graduated from Washington University in St. Louis with a Bachelor of Arts in Ancient Studies and from Teachers College, Columbia University in the City of New York with a Master of Arts in Arts Administration, completing a thesis focusing on historic house museums and their sustainability, accessibility, and innovation in the 21st century.
