

LISA WRIGHT

Director

Lisa Wright is responsible for visitor experience strategy, planning and development for a broad range of cultural, natural, and academic institutions

Lisa has written a number of visitor experience strategies and plans for an array of clients. She has also developed exhibition and interpretive content for many projects, working closely with clients, community stakeholders, Indigenous partners, subject matter experts, and exhibition designers to write exhibit text, select images and artifacts, and develop multimedia and special exhibit treatments. Lisa has written chapters for several of Lord's publications, including "Curatorship and Content Development" in the Manual of Museum Exhibitions, 2nd and 3rd eds. and "New Frontiers in the Visitor Experience" in the Manual of Digital Museum Planning. She has also presented on exhibition development at several conferences and served on the board of the Museums Association of the Caribbean.

As a consultant, Lisa helps her clients develop stimulating and innovative visitor experiences to engage audiences with diverse backgrounds, interests, and learning styles. Lisa's lifelong passion for history, nature, and the arts fuels her drive to create transformative visitor experiences.
